Chapter 365: The Legion of Light

As Sung Jin-Woo continued his evolution and expanded his divine reach, the archangels were not alone in their divine duties. From the depths of his divine essence, he created centillions of centillions of centillions of two-to-four-winged angels. These angels, though not as powerful as the archangels, were an essential force that served to maintain the balance of the multiverse, spreading throughout realms like an unending tide of divine energy.

The Creation of the Angelic Legion

Each of these angels was born from the purest light, embodying Sung Jin-Woo's divine will. Their wings varied in number and size, but each was imbued with the light of creation itself. The angels were given the ability to fly through the heavens of countless realms, their forms glowing with radiant energy, a sign of their divinity.

The immense number of these angels ensured that no realm would be left without divine protection. They were scattered across the multiverse, filling the skies of every universe under Sung Jin-Woo's protection. The sheer scale of their numbers was staggering—centillions of centillions of angels, with each one capable of harnessing the divine energy of their creator.

The Role of the Two-to-Four-Winged Angels

While the archangels held the highest authority, the two-to-four-winged angels served in various essential roles throughout the multiverse:

1. Protectors of the Realms: These angels stood as guardians over the lesser realms. They ensured that no malevolent force, be it outer entities or dimensional rifts, would corrupt the sanctity of creation. They acted as shields, their wings offering both defense and offense when necessary.

2. Messengers of the Divine: They delivered Sung Jin-Woo's divine messages across realms, ensuring that the will of the True Absolute One was known. These messengers carried knowledge and blessings to all beings, spreading his light and wisdom throughout creation.

3. Guides for Mortal Souls: As mortal beings passed between the realms of life and death, these angels served as guides, escorting souls to their destined afterlife. They were compassionate and patient, ensuring that each soul was treated with reverence.

4. Warriors of Light: When the realms faced threats, these angels joined the archangels in battle. Their numbers allowed them to swarm enemies, overwhelming any force that sought to disrupt the harmony of the multiverse. They were not as powerful as the archangels, but their sheer numbers, coordination, and divine energy made them a force to be reckoned with.

The Angelic Hierarchy

While the two-to-four-winged angels were not as powerful as the archangels, they were still part of a strict hierarchy that allowed for perfect order and unity. The angels were divided into legions, each led by a commander, who reported directly to Gabriel. These commanders, though lesser beings than the archangels, were still mighty in their own right and commanded respect from their legions.

Angel Commanders: Each commander had hundreds of wings and was entrusted with leading legions of thousands of angels. Their primary responsibility was to ensure that the angels under their command remained loyal and efficient.

Legions: The angels were divided into countless legions, with each legion containing billions of angels. These legions were tasked with specific duties, whether it be the protection of a realm, the delivery of divine messages, or the eradication of threats.

The Impact of the Angelic Legion

The sheer scale of the angelic forces was a constant reminder of Sung Jin-Woo's dominion over creation. The angels filled the skies of every realm, their radiant forms casting light over the multiverse. No place was left untouched by their presence, and no evil went unnoticed. They acted as both protectors and messengers, ensuring that the will of the True Absolute One reached every corner of the multiverse.

Wherever there was darkness, the angels would shine their light, pushing back the void and ensuring that order reigned supreme. To the mortal beings in the realms, the sight of these celestial beings was both awe-inspiring and reassuring. They knew that no matter the trials they faced, Sung Jin-Woo's angels would be there to protect them.

The Future of the Angelic Legion

With the creation of these centillions of angels, the True Absolute One ensured that his divine reach would never be limited. His angels were not only symbols of his strength but also of his unyielding care for all beings in the multiverse. They would continue to serve and protect for as long as Sung Jin-Woo ruled.

The angelic legion, with its uncountable numbers, would be the eternal guardians of creation, ensuring that no force, no matter how powerful, could ever disrupt the peace and balance that Sung Jin-Woo had worked so hard to establish.